

Youth Endowment Fund (YEF) – Peer Action Collective (PAC)

PAC – Peer Researcher (12 posts)

The Peer Action Collective (PAC) is a project funded by the Youth Endowment Fund. It is a partnership that will recruit young people (16-25 yrs old) to undertake research with other young people to understand their experiences of violence with their communities and how best to tackle this through social action.

All too often, children and young people who experience violence aren't heard. However, change will not happen if you're not at the heart of it. That is why the PAC exists.

Funded by the Co-op, the Youth Endowment Fund and the #iwill Fund, the PAC is here to support you to take the lead. It's a ground-breaking network of Peer Researchers. That means that you'll be in charge of asking questions and finding out what needs to happen to make your area a better place for children and young people to live. But it's about more than learning about what needs to change.

Being part of the PAC means you'll get support to take your research and turn it into action. From campaigning to improve local mental health services, setting up a youth centre or supporting more young people into employment – together, we'll create opportunities for you to make your community a safer, fairer place.
